FRONTS EN CONSTRUCTION

Du 8 au 15 juin 2026, la Sorbonne Nouvelle, avec l'université Grenoble et l'Aix-Marseille Université, accueille pour la première fois en France la conférence internationale du Radical Film Network (RFN).

Fondée en 2013, cette association réunit des chercheur·e·s, des cinéastes, des programmateur·rice·s et archivistes impliqué·e·s dans la culture cinématographique indépendante. Le RFN regroupe notamment plus de 240 organisations issues de 58 pays à travers le monde : des ateliers d'artistes et collectifs de production aux archives, coopératives, distributeurs, festivals de cinéma et lieux de projection, ainsi qu'un ensemble d'autres groupes et individus difficiles à mettre dans des catégories.

Les rencontres du RFN — colloques, « anti-colloques », festivals et réunions — ont pour objectif d'offrir un espace ouvert de rencontre, d'échange, de pensée et de partage de films, d'expériences, de savoirs et de pratiques.

À la suite des précédents colloques du RFN, organisés à Birmingham, Glasgow, New York, Tolpuddle, Dublin, Nottingham, Berlin, Gênes et Madrid, c'est à Paris que se tient la douzième conférence du Radical Film Network.

Lors de cette édition, nous lançons une invitation à débattre de la capacité du cinéma à documenter, questionner et transformer la réalité : autrement dit, à construire des fronts. Quatre-vingt-dix ans après la victoire des Fronts populaires en Europe, à un moment où le fascisme et des projets qui relèvent de la nécropolitique (re)font surface, la conférence de 2026 entend susciter une réflexion approfondie sur l'histoire du cinéma militant, engagé et expérimental, dans un monde par ailleurs menacé par la crise environnementale et marqué par l'impuissance des institutions politico-juridiques internationales face aux génocides en cours en Palestine et dans d'autres zones géopolitiques. Elle invite à se demander sur l'« état de la forme » de ces cinémas, en portant une attention particulière, entre autres, aux stratégies formelles, aux modes de production et de distribution, aux pratiques pédagogiques et aux opérations archivistiques.

BUILDING FRONTS

From June 8 to 15, 2026, Sorbonne Nouvelle University, together with Grenoble University and Aix-Marseille University, is hosting the Radical Film Network (RFN) International Conference for the first time in France.

The Radical Film Network (RFN) was founded in 2013 when a group of activists, academics, filmmakers and programmers involved in radical film culture in Britain met to discuss the ways in which they could work together to support its development, growth and sustainability. Since then, the RFN has grown rapidly, and now consists of more than 240 organisations from 58 countries around the world: from artists' studios and production collectives to archives, co-ops, distributors, film festivals and exhibition venues, as well as a host of other less easily categorised groups and individuals.

RFN gatherings — conferences and unconferences, festivals and meetings — aim to offer a space open to everyone interested in radical film cultures to meet, come together and share experiences and knowledge on how we conceive and develop our practice.

Following the previous RFN conferences in Birmingham, Glasgow, New York City, Tolpuddle, Dublin, Nottingham, Berlin, Genoa and Madrid, the 12th edition of the Radical Film Network conference takes place in Paris.

We extend an invitation to discuss the ability of cinema to document, question and transform reality — to build fronts. Ninety years after the victory of the Popular Fronts in Europe, when fascism and necropolitical imperialist projects (re)emerge, this edition of RFN aims to incite a broad discussion on the history of militant, engaged and experimental cinema, in a world threatened by climate crisis, while international politico-juridical institutions risk collapse in the context of the ongoing genocides in Palestine and in other geopolitical zones. It aims to discuss cinema's "state of the form," focusing, among other aspects, on formal strategies, modes of production and distribution, pedagogical practices, and archival operations.
